Supplement Highlight

DHEA:

Dehydroepiandrosterone (DHEA) is a steroid hormone precursor, but it is not just a precursor to other hormones. Your cells have their own receptor sites for DHEA. It is secreted primarily from the adrenal glands. DHEA shifts you from a catabolic, or breaking-down state, to an anabolic, or protein-building state. DHEA functions as the counterpart to the stress hormone cortisol. Maintaining healthy DHEA levels is crucial for balancing the catabolic effects of cortisol.
